Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurSomeone killed Adie Wildingand now theyre trying to kill her again!Just a normal twenty-something girl, with a couple or four boyfriend mistakes behind her and a recent relocation to London, Adie Wilding is living an ordinary life. Then shes shot on the street, dies, and is revived. So far, a busier day than expected. While in hospital, she meets to-die-for Nathan Crawford, who helps unravel the motives behind the not-as-random-as-it-seems attack, while making her fall madly in love with him. With a wicked sense of humour, a penchant for Latin idioms, and a heavy fog on her memory, Adie alternates between clever and ditzyeven as the body count rises!Prsentation de l'diteurSomeone killed Adie Wildingand now theyre trying to kill her again!Just a normal twenty-something girl, with a couple or four boyfriend mistakes behind her and a recent relocation to London, Adie Wilding is living an ordinary life.

Biographie de l'auteur Roberta Pearce's relationship with romance novels began when she fell into a box of her aunts dog-eared treasures that miraculously opened at the most interesting bits. All through post-secondary adventures Russian Lit: good; torrid love scenes: better this amour de HEA took her, though it goes without saying that she failed French. One day, she decided to make a useful contribution to society and write HEAs rather than just reading them, and still seeks one for herself in real life. Winner of 2013 2014 NaNoWriMo, Pearce is still waiting for her cheques. Her influences include Fyodor Dostoyevsky [his dreamy side], Douglas Adams, Rupert Brooke, Mary Burchell, and Omar Khayyam. While she currently has no pets, she once had a pair of Siamese fighting fish named Pat and Mike, whose ghosts appear occasionally in her novels. Her imaginary hobbies include climbing Kilimanjaro and enjoying lofty literature. Her real hobbies include drinking copious bottles of wine with good friends while discussing anything that pops to mind.
